DENY WILSON WARNING OF RENEWAL OF WAR

ALLIED PRISONERS IN PITTABLE CONDITION

WILSON GOING TO PEACE COUNCIL TO ASSURE LEAGUE OF NATIONS

The plans for the trip are about completed and it was stated today that a complete announcement is expected before the end of the week.

President Wilson now is expected to leave for Europe in the near future.

The President will leave with Mrs. Wilson and Mr. and Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, Jr., and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph P. Kamp.

The President will leave for Europe in the near future.

Plans include in addition to this "world federation idea," the reconstruction of the map of the world along racial lines.

There are two sharply opposing views as to the future of the world. One is that the world should be divided into racial groups, and the other is that the world should be divided into national groups.

The President is expected to announce his plans for the future of the world.

Other nations the general opinion that in his opinion, and in the opinion of many leaders of world thought, will end for all future years between nations.

Three plans include in addition to this "world federation idea," the reconstruction of the map of the world along racial lines.

There are two sharply opposing views as to the future of the world. One is that the world should be divided into racial groups, and the other is that the world should be divided into national groups.

They touch on occupation of German territory west of the Rhine, are not modified. It will "make for the period of Bolshevism," is a typical German lie, although fathered by no less a personage than Dr. Holt, the German foreign secretary.

His statement that "unless there are modifications," the effect shall be that "we shall inevitably advance toward more or less Bolshevism," is one of the covert threats which Germany has made as familiar throughout the world.

Propaganda, the charges on which are being worked in every possible way, is that Germany actually faces starvation and needs an early and complete peace. This is also a complete fabrication. Germany has no need to starve her people.

The element already in control of the peace conference is not a peace conference, but a peace conference in name only.

HOW THE ALLIES ADVANCE UPON GERMAN SOIL

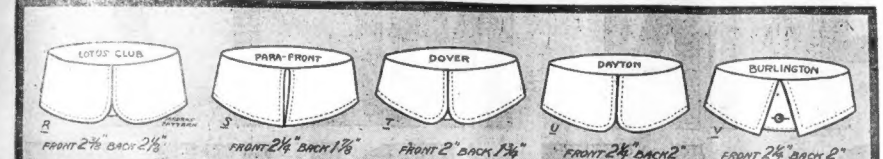

PEACE SESSION MAY START ON XMAS DAY

More Than Likely Says Graves, Assembly Will Take Place After English Election

By JOHN TEMPLE GRAVES
Washington, Nov. 18.—The President has very frankly set at rest the mooted question of his going to the peace conference by the announcement that he will sail for France immediately after the opening of the regular session of Congress for the purpose of taking part in the discussion and settlement of the peace features of the treaty of peace.

The whole country will be glad to read the announcement, because the entire country wishes the President to see and hear from all the European countries desiring the President to be in person at the world's greatest assembly in whose premises he has been an great part, and which will be the final judgment of the world as to the peace conference.

The President will not remain during the entire program of the conference. He will remain at the conference until the opening session, which will be held on December 1st.

Heavy black line shows the extent to which the allies have advanced in Belgium and Alsace-Lorraine today as the Germans fall back to the Rhine. King Albert and his troops re-entered his former capital, Brussels. The Americans entered Etalle, Longwy and Conflans. The French with Pétain today made a march on France, at their head entered Metz. French troops farther south occupied St. Louis, opposite Basel, Switzerland, and they are virtually at the Rhine.

Iron Crosses Selling Now for a Cent Apiece!

By International News Service.
Amsterdam, Nov. 18.—So lavishly did the German Kaiser bestow Iron Crosses during the war that they are now selling for five pfennig (one American cent) apiece, says the Telegram.

MAY SUE U. S. FOR SEIZURE OF CABLES

FOR SEIZURE OF CABLES

New York, Nov. 12.—Clarence Mackay, head of the Postal Telegraph system, intimated in a statement here that the company may sue the government for taking over control of the cable lines.

He characterized the government action as "apparently a preliminary march toward government ownership," and expressed belief that

JOHN T. PARKERSON MAX KAUDS HOOVER

Exiled Burgomaster of Brussels
Also Praised Brand
Whitlock

By JOHN T. PARKERSON,
International News Service Staff
Correspondent

With the British Army on the Western Front, Nov. 13—Burgomaster Max of Brussels, one of the famous figures of the war, who motivated Bruges on Sunday, where he spent his conference with King Albert, afterwards gave an interview to the correspondents in which he admitted that he had been in Brussels since the American Federal administration for their work in Belgium.

"It will soon be back in my own city," he said, "and I shall be glad to see you, but I shall not be back in my own city."

"They (the Germans) want to send me to Holland or Belgium, but I shall not go," he said, "I shall stay in Brussels, now and here."

Mr. Max, though, as likely of Mr. Hoover that he asked if he had any chance for the presidency of the United States. He added that he would like to see the food administrator in that office.

When Burgomaster Max was carried away from Brussels by the German he had a heavy heart, but he was not alone. He was accompanied by a number of his friends, and he was not alone.

Today it is strewn with gray and the sun shines in about twenty pounds lighter in weight.

CARDINAL MICHEL MEN.
Special Messenger, another Belgian, was seen by the International News Service staff, who interviewed him on the pretext that he was leaving a church after Christmas to die.

"It did not come a minute too soon," he said, "but I am interested to know whether President Wilson was coming to Belgium to the peace conference, the Cardinal who heard his interview on the pretext that he was very tired and drove away in his carriage."

The Cardinal was impressive, tall, thin and wore his indefatigable laurel in behalf of his people. He was not alone.

A British citizen, who has just arrived here from London, who witnessed the arrival of the former Kaiser, told the International News Service staff that he was not alone.

"HOOF" FOR EX-KAISER.
When Kaiser Wilhelm II. departed from the city, the Kaiser was not alone.

The Kaiser appeared nervous, but forced a smile while talking to the Dutch officials.

Miss Mary G. Hay to Speak.
Miss Mary G. Hay, of New York, will be the speaker at the Fall business meeting of the Massachusetts Women's Suffrage Association at No. 248 Boylston street tomorrow afternoon.

This Day in Our History

THIS is the anniversary of the consecration, in 1863, of the battlefield of Gettysburg as a national cemetery. Lincoln's dedication read there is considered one of the finest gems of English literature in matter, form and sentiment.

The Zeppelin's Passenger

An Absorbing War-Time Novel
Based on the Adventures of a
German Spy in England

CHAPTER XI.

"HENRY stepped back from the scales and eyed the fish which he had been weighing, admiringly.

"You see that, Mills? You see that, Jimmy?" he pointed out. "Six and three-quarter pounds! I was right almost to a ounce. He's a fine fellow."

"A very extraordinary fish, sir," the butler observed. "Will you allow me to take your o'clock? Dinner was served nearly an hour ago."

"Sir Henry slipped off his dripping coat and handed them over."

"All this right," he replied. "Listen. Don't say a word about my arrival to your mistress at present. I have some writing to do. Bring me a glass of cherry at once, or mix a cocktail if you can do so without being asked, and take Jimmy and Anne and give him some whiskey and soda."

"But what about your own dinner, sir?"

"I'll have a tray in the gun-room," his master decided, "say in twenty minutes. I'll be down. Who did you say were dining?"

"Two of the young officers from the Depot, sir—Mr. Harcourt and Mr. Sinclair—and Mr. Hamer Les-

"Lesingham, as he's called? Sir Henry repeated, as he bent himself to his writing-table. "Mills," he added to the confidential waiter, "what sort did you serve?"

"The butler's expression was one of obvious trepidation.

"Not the Viennese, sir," he announced with emphasis. "Some very excellent wood port, which we procured for shooting luscious. The young gentlemen like it."

"I have a jewel, Mills," his master declared. "Now you understand an apartment for my own, some whiskey for Jimmy in your room, and not a word about this matter. Good night, Jimmy! Sleep. We were too late for the market, but we had some grand moments. The milkman, you'll have a day or two rest, shall you?"

"Aye, aye, sir," Mills replied. "We got in just in time. There's nothing more than a small corner of the French windows look, the rain beat against the pane, and a dull booming of wind was clearly audible from outside."

"I'm afraid that, as usually, he agreed. "Come up and have a chat tomorrow, Jimmy, if your wife will spare you."

"It'll be around before 11, sir," the Frenchman promised, and Sir Henry waited for the closing of the door. Then he leaned forward and used this:

Childhood Home of Christ as It Looks Today

Photographs of the Town of Nazareth, Now in the Hands of Christian Conquerors After Long Subjection by the Turks

Thanksgiving Dinner

By Loretta C. Lynch

PLANNING to have turkey this year? You know how to pick out a good one. Young turkeys are best. As a rule, hen turkeys are best. A good turkey has white skin, black legs, a plump breast and the breast-bone is yielding. Young cock turkeys have small spurs. In this way you may distinguish them from hens.

Before any kind of poultry is cooked the hairs must be singed by holding the bird over the flame. The skin feathers may be removed with a vegetable knife and your thumb. Chop off head and feet. Sometimes the tendons of the legs are removed with the feet.

To remove the entrails, make a cut just large enough to admit your hand between one leg and the body. Work your hand around carefully between the entrails and the body till the entrails can be drawn out all together. Put two fingers down between the neck and the skin and find the windpipe and the little bag known as the crop. Draw these out.

Be sure to remove the kidneys, which lie in a hollow near the edge of the backbone. The lungs, a bright red spongy substance, should be removed from the chest walls.

Turn down the skin of the neck and chop off the neck close to the body. Save the neck. Leave a couple of inches of skin to fold over. Cut off the oil bag near the rump. Rinse clean water through the body and wipe with a damp cloth.

Save heart, liver and gizzard. Cut into the gizzard until the inner sac comes into view. Pull off the outer coat and remove the sac and throw it away. Wash the gizzard. Put them into a saucepan with the neck and any pieces of skin. Cover with cold, slightly salted water. Cook slowly until the meat falls from the neck. The broth may be used in a gravy.

Here are a couple of recipes for good stuffings:

POTATO STUFFING.
Two cups mashed potatoes, 1 cup soft bread crumbs, 1 teaspoonful poultry seasoning, 1 teaspoonful salt, finely chopped onions melted butter to moisten, 1 egg.

Draw the neck skin down and lay over the back. Cross wings on back, so as to hold this skin in place. If there is not enough of the skin of the legs to tie, use a string to tie the neck and legs.

Soak the turkey in cold water and salt. Place in oven on roasting stand. Roast in air until brown. Turn the bird after every ten minutes with the melted fat that collects in the bottom of the pan. If there is not enough of this a little boiling water may be added.

To roughly estimate the time a bird should be roasted, multiply the number pounds by half an hour. After the bird is well roasted, reduce the heat in the oven.

If you do not have turkey, a nice fat chicken or a small duck or a young goose may be prepared in a similar manner.

Up-to-Date Aprons

By Rita Stuyvesant

THE "kitchen soldier" in her own uniform just as her son in camp is, when doing duty as a "kitchen police." The woman who is canning or conserving wheat and sugar by using substitutes or perhaps trying out a few tasty new recipes will surely be tempted by the new war-time aprons. Out along simple lines, they are easily made at home and answer for many practical purposes of the day's routine.

A war-brother recently showed me a dainty apron which she had included in her trousseau. It was of blue and white checked gingham and "all bound" round with red and could be slipped on in a jiffy. Cut in two pieces, front and back, it fastened under the deep arm hole with a button and button.

It had a wide, flat collar and a hole bound in red. It had a round neck and small opening at the back. It fastened under the deep arm hole with a button and button.

Little Mothers

A SUBJECT TO THINK ABOUT

By Beatrice Fairfax

A GOOD many crystal visions have been said about the future of our people work.

I wonder if some of these aren't true. For if we are not a little later and a little heartless, and a little disinclined to help the world's affairs, how is it that we can so contentedly watch "little mothers" overwork themselves?

We find them picturesque, these thin-faced, serious girls of twelve and fourteen who desperately play a mother's part to sprawling, noisy families of younger brothers and sisters.

We praise their usefulness and efficiency, and we seem to find in them a satisfactory solution of that problem that exists wherever there are young children and a mother obliged to work outside the home.

And it is true that they are wonderful little creatures, these young girls who are themselves still children, but who carry more than an adult burden. In the lower part of the city you will find them in any park or square. The youngest baby they carry in their arms, always with a most loving tenderness.

The others they guard with vigilance that no mother either. Scarcely five minutes can pass without their eyes following the mother who brings back to two others who have quarreled, or comforting an infant who has been left out of a game.

Try an easy job, this multiple child-tending, as most of us know. How have you a girl's hand to do so well? Where have they developed that superhuman patience that no mother either?

The grown-up mothers from the same neighborhood, however, may be at the bottom, aren't in the least patient. They shake and shove and their little children, who are the most adorable regularity, and we find the same thing in the mothers who are tired and overworked.

But there's an even greater factor in the pale, trembling face of the "little mothers." They are not at all unfeeling. They are not at all unfeeling. They are not at all unfeeling. They are not at all unfeeling. They are not at all unfeeling.

They are not at all unfeeling. They are not at all unfeeling. They are not at all unfeeling. They are not at all unfeeling. They are not at all unfeeling.

They are not at all unfeeling. They are not at all unfeeling. They are not at all unfeeling. They are not at all unfeeling. They are not at all unfeeling.

They are not at all unfeeling. They are not at all unfeeling. They are not at all unfeeling. They are not at all unfeeling. They are not at all unfeeling.

They are not at all unfeeling. They are not at all unfeeling. They are not at all unfeeling. They are not at all unfeeling. They are not at all unfeeling.

They are not at all unfeeling. They are not at all unfeeling. They are not at all unfeeling. They are not at all unfeeling. They are not at all unfeeling.

They are not at all unfeeling. They are not at all unfeeling. They are not at all unfeeling. They are not at all unfeeling. They are not at all unfeeling.

They are not at all unfeeling. They are not at all unfeeling. They are not at all unfeeling. They are not at all unfeeling. They are not at all unfeeling.

They are not at all unfeeling. They are not at all unfeeling. They are not at all unfeeling. They are not at all unfeeling. They are not at all unfeeling.

Germans Aided Turkish Armenian Atrocities Justified

Teuton Professors, Declares American Ambassador

Grand Vizier Obdurate.

In order that I might not be accused of neglecting any influencing the Ottoman government, I brought the Armenians several times to the Grand Vizier's attention. As he was not an Egyptian, and a man of education and breeding, it seemed to me that he might have a somewhat different attitude toward the Armenians than Talat and Enver. I soon found that merely to subject irritated him greatly.

The Grand Vizier showed his attitude when the Great Charge d'Affaires spoke to him about the persecutions of the Greeks. Said Halim said that such manifestations did the Greeks more harm than good.

Enver, Halim and the rest were ever insistent on the point that the Armenians should be treated as subjects of the empire, and not as foreigners. A few days after this visit the Under-Secretary of State called on the American ambassador to deliver a message from Ljajovic.

Jajovic, who then had jurisdiction over the Balkans, was very much annoyed at the interval which the American consuls had been making in the Armenian affairs.

Jajovic could not distinguish between the innocent and the guilty, and he had to punish them all. Some time later Jajovic complained to me that the Armenians were hindering the work of the government.

As a matter of fact, I was myself sending most of this information, and I did not stop.

CHAPTER XXV.

TEUTON GUILT IN ARMENIA.

I suppose that there is no phase of the Armenian question which has aroused more interest than this. Had the Germans any part in it? To be sure, the Germans were responsible for the wholesale slaughter of the Armenians.

It did not merely acquiesce, or did they oppose the persecution? The Armenians in the last four years, had become responsible for many of the blackest acts in history. It was their responsibility for this, unquestionably.

I presume most people will detect in the remarks of these Turkish chiefs certain "resemblance to the Armenians" which is very plain to see. They were repeating certain phrases used by the Armenians in their persecution of the Armenians.

HENRY FORD IS 4-ALARM FIRE
'OFF' CHARITY IN CAMBRIDGE
FOR LIFE' CAUSES SCARE

The Mount Auburn section of Cambridge today was threatened by a four-alarm fire, which caused a damage of $100,000, according to the Mannes Hook Company at No. 64 Aberdeen street, Cambridge, according to an estimate by the police.

The fire broke out in a boiler room and in two and one-half stories high. James Calverne, night watchman, called the fire department to the boiler room on the first floor.

Train service on one of the Boston and Maine lines was suspended for fear of the bomb company's plant was held up for more than an hour. During the time the fire was burning, the train filled with employees at the station and the fire department on the track in the direction of Lowell.

Fire hoses had been thrown across the tracks. Sergeant James Kelley of the fire department carried a lantern and dashed down the tracks to the fire.

He signaled to and before the train stopped, the fire department had cranked over the fire hose. The train was obliged to wait for an hour.

Civilization Faces a New Struggle Even More Potentous Than the One Just Ended

The New York American of Monday publishes the following editorial:

On September 5 the Swiss Ambassador at Petrograd handed to Tschischinski, Commissary for Foreign Affairs of the Soviet Republic, a formal protest of the diplomatic representatives of the neutral Powers against the terroristic tactics employed by the Soviet Government.

The note declared that the "acts of terrorism arouse the indignation of the entire civilized world, and threatened that the neutral Governments would eventually "demand of the persons guilty of these arbitrary acts the needed satisfaction and personal legal responsibility."

To this note the Soviet Government made a vigorous and defiant reply, from which we print the following extracts:

To the Representatives of the Capitalist Neutral Powers:

The note handed to us by the representatives of the neutral Powers on September 5 constitutes an act of gross interference in the internal affairs of Russia. The Soviet Government might leave this act without any answer whatever. But the Soviet Government utilizes with pleasure every opportunity to make clear to the popular masses of all countries the nature of its policies, for the reason that it is the representative not only of the working class of Russia, but of the entire exploited human race.

Before we explain why the workers' and peasants' government applies the red terror, against which the representatives of the neutral Powers protest in the name of humanity, and because of which they threaten us with the indignation of the entire civilized world, we shall take the liberty of asking them a few questions:

It is known to the representatives of the neutral Powers that, already in its fifth year, there rages an international war into which a little clique of bankers, generals and bureaucrats has pushed the masses of the people of the entire world; that the masses of the people are mutually destroying themselves and are cutting each other's throats so that the capitalists may profit billions? Is it known to them that in this war not only have millions of human beings been killed at the front, but that both warring parties have bombed open cities and have killed unarmed women and children? Is it known to them that in this war one of the worst crimes of the century has been committed, namely, the death by starvation in that, contrary to international law, it has cut off the supply of bread, hoping that, by means of the starvation of children, it can force upon the other party an unconditional surrender? Is it known to them that the warring parties take as prisoners hundreds of thousands of unarmed, peaceful citizens, putting them to forced labor far from home and taking from them every right of redress? Is it known to them that in the warring countries the ruling capitalist clique has robbed the masses of the people of the right of assembly, of the freedom of the press, and of the right to strike, and that, for even the faintest attempt at protest against the white terror of the bourgeoisie, the workers are sent to jail or are sent to the front in order to kill within them every thought of their human rights?

The so-called neutral countries did not dare to protest, with as much as a single word, against the white terror of capital; nay, they did not even wish to protest, because the bourgeoisie of all neutral countries aided the capitalists of the warring countries to continue the war for the countless billions made billions by furnishing war material to both imperialistic camps.

We shall permit ourselves to ask still another question: Have the representatives of the neutral Powers, the Sinn Feiners in Dublin? About shooting, without court order, of hundreds of Irishmen, including Sheffington? Have they ever heard of the white terror in Finland, the thousands of workers shot, the tens of thousands of workmen rotting in the jails, of their wives and children, none of whom were ever charged with anything or ever will be? Have they not heard of the mass executions of workers and peasants in the Ukraine? Of the thousands of workmen by the brave Czecho-Slovaks, these hirelings of French-English capital? The Governments of the so-called neutral countries heard of all this, but never did the thought occur to them that in the defense of the interests of the bourgeoisie in suppressing the working class movement, because they, themselves, are ready at any moment to shoot the workers battling for their rights, and in their own countries they are ready, in the name of the defense of the interests of the bourgeoisie, to suppress the slightest sign of the rising of an indignant working class.

It is sufficient to remind oneself of the recent suppression by military force, of labor organizations in Denmark, in Norway, in Holland, in Switzerland, etc. Not yet have the workers of Switzerland, Holland and Denmark risen, but already do the Governments of these countries mobilize the military forces against the slightest movement of protest on the part of the workers.

When the representatives of the neutral countries threaten us with the indignation of the civilized world, and protest against the red terror in the name of humanity, then we call their attention to the fact that they have not been sent to Russia to defend the principles of humanity, but to take care of the interests of capitalist states; and we advise them not to threaten us with the indignation of the civilized world that is dripping from head to foot with the blood of the workers, but themselves to tremble before the wrath of the masses of the people of the entire world, who will rise up against the "civilization" which has plunged the whole human race into the unspeakable misery of a butchery without end.

The majority of the Russian people, as represented in the second congress of the workers, peasants, soldiers and Cossack deputies, placed the governmental power in the hands of the workers and peasants. A handful of capitalists who desired to repossess themselves of the factories and banks taken from them on behalf of the people, a handful of landowners who want to take again from the peasants the land they now hold; a handful of generals who again want to teach discipline to the workers and peasants with a whip, have refused to recognize the decision of the Russian people. With the money of foreign capitalists they have mobilized counter-revolutionary bands, by whose aid they cut Russia off from bread in the boy hand of hunger they strangle the Russian revolution. Having convinced themselves of the impossibility of overthrowing the workers' government, supported by the masses of the workers, they organize counter-revolutionary riots in order to prevent the workers' and peasants' government from pursuing its constructive work in order to prevent it from freeing the country from the anarchy into which the criminal policy of former Governments has plunged it. They have betrayed Russia in the North, in the South, and in the East, to foreign imperialist states by selling foreign bayonets from wherever they could get them. Hidden behind a forest of foreign bayonets, they send hired assassins to destroy the leaders of the working class, in whom not only the proletariat of Russia but the entire human race sees the personification of its hopes. The Russian people will crush mercilessly this counter-revolutionary clique which, with the aid of foreign capital and the Russian bourgeoisie, wants more to put the slave's nose around the neck of the Russian people.

We reject, emphatically, interference on the part of neutral capitalist Powers in behalf of the Russian bourgeoisie, and declare that any attempt on the part of the representatives of these Powers to go beyond the boundaries of the lawful protection of their own nationals will be regarded as an attempt to give support to the Russian counter-revolution.

This reply to the representatives of the neutral Powers is exceptionally interesting as expressing clearly and fully the viewpoint of the Russian Soviet Government.

Nominally, the reply is addressed to the Swiss Ambassador. In reality it is addressed to the whole world, and is an appeal of the Soviet Government to the working classes in all countries to unite in the forcible overthrow of existing political and social conditions and the substitution of Internationalism and Socialism.

To begin with, the Russian revolutionists have the quality of knowing clearly what they want to do.

They want to turn existing society upside down.

In their scheme the farmers and laborers are to govern through committees, are to be the employers instead of the employees of capital, are to live in the best houses, eat the best food, wear the best clothes and have the best times.

The governing committees of the Soviets are to do all buying and selling, abroad and at home; are to run the railroads; operate the mines, the factories and all business activities, not for individual profit but for the common benefit.

There are to be no private employers of labor. Labor is to cease to be a commodity, bought and sold in the market. All class distinctions are to be abolished and absolute equality of citizens established.

The theory of the French revolution—liberty, fraternity and equality—is to be put in practice.

National distinctions are to be destroyed, and the workers of the world are to make common cause against the old social order, and to put in force everywhere the system of Soviet government. Thus begins in the world a new conflict of principles of human government and human social relations, and this conflict will eventually be fought out in every nation under the sun.

We have quoted at such length from the Soviet Government's reply to the diplomatic representatives of other Governments because this reply so fully reveals the International Socialists' frame of mind and their objects and purposes.

The Internationalists look upon the war not as we do, as a victory for democracy, but as a victory for capitalists, and they abhor the victory and the victors almost as thoroughly as they abhor the autocrats and aristocrats overthrown by the war.

No matter how wrong their view may be, it is instructive and useful to know what that view is and how they mean to try to uphold it.

That the Internationalists mean to use violence and terror to the limit, they make very plain.

The justification they allege is that the existing Governments, representing the existing order of society, have destroyed the lives of millions of men by dreadful means of warfare, have caused the death of hundreds of thousands of women and children and aged non-combatants by submarine attacks, by aerial attacks, by sea blockades and land blockades, shutting off food supplies from the civilian populations, and they argue that the men who have done these things have no right to complain if they, in turn, are shot, hanged, drowned or starved by the resentful remnants of the masses so cruelly exploited.

There may be no force in this argument to our ears, but it does have force in the ears of millions of Internationalists, and it is only fair to say that we have long warned the Governments that this argument would surely be used, and would surely be used with terrible effect among Europe's masses if the war could not be composed before its miseries and agonies maddened those masses.

This reply of the Soviet Government is the most ominous event that has occurred since the European Governments went to war.

It is, indeed, another declaration of universal war, and it must be met with serious conception of its gravity and with heroic effort to stay its terrors.

There are two ways of meeting this mighty movement.

One is to attempt to put it down with fleets and armies and court-martials—with violence.

The other is to acknowledge all that is rightful in the demands of the European Socialists and, above all, to make haste to feed the European masses—of whatever nations—relieve them of their miseries, now that the war is ended, exactly as we did before we participated in the war with our armies and fleets.

We think that if the attempt is made to destroy the Soviet Government in Russia and the Socialist movements in other European nations by armed force, the Socialist extremists of all countries will unite and Europe will go to smash and the white man's civilization be again drowned in blood and tears.

But if the counsels of moderation prevail, if we go to the aid of all these miserable people with as much energy and strength as we employed to overthrow their rulers and beat their armies, then it is almost sure that peace with order will be rapidly established and that human society will seek its necessary reforms and progressions by constructive methods instead of by a desperate appeal to fire and sword and all the appalling accompaniments of the Red Terror.

There should be left no justice in the Soviet's contention that they cannot be blamed for employing the Red Terror as long as they are confronted by the White Terror.

The heart's desire of every good and wise man is that both of these terrors may be banished forever from the earth in which children of men perform most dwell, and in which we ought to be able to find a way to dwell in useful, progressive, happy fraternity and helpfulness.

We have won our great struggle with arms and valor.

It now remains to be seen whether we are capable of winning a far more momentous struggle with food, aid, compassion, guidance and good sense.

Ye TOWNE GOSSIP

By K. C. B.

DEAR K. C. B.—After a busy day at the office I look forward to a pleasant dinner, my pipe and a book. And I get home and find my dress clothes neatly laid out for me. I ask my wife and she tells me we have been invited to a banquet and she has accepted. I protest in vain. At the dinner I meet a lot of people whom I never met before and hope I may never meet again. What am I going to do about it? F. C. L.

MY DEAR FRED,

IN THE first place,

YOU MADE a mistake.

WHEN YOU picked out your wife.

YOU SHOULD have found one.

WHOM YOU could frighten.

LIKE I did—NOT

AND THEN I'm here.

NOT TO talk at breakfast.

UNLESS YOU start it.

AND MAKE her understand.

THAT THE primary object

of a well-orderd home

IS TO provide a place.

WHERE A man may go.

AND REST in comfort.

WHEN THERE'S no other place.

THAT HE wants to go to.

JUST AT the time.

AND HAVE it understood.

THAT BECAUSE you're married.

IT DOESN'T mean.

THAT YOU'RE giving up your freedom.

TO DO whatever you like.

AND HAVE it understood.

YOU WON'T go anywhere.

YOU DON'T want to go.

AND IF you don't like her friends.

YOU WON'T have them around.

AND KEEP at her like that.

FOR A month or two.

AND WEAR those slippers.

AND SHE'LL quit down.

SO AS not to disturb you.

AND SHE'LL always whisper.

AND SHE'LL give you the cream.

OFF THE top of the bottle.

AND USE milk herself.

AND SHE WON'T eat white meat.

WHEN YOU have chicken.

AND WILL lie and tell you.

SHE DOESN'T like it.

AND AFTER a while.

YOU'LL GET so you hate her.

AND HER shirt will be gone.

AND NOBODY will like her.

EXCEPT THE hired girl.

AND SHE'LL be sorry for her.

AND YOU won't get any invitations.

TO GO anywhere.

AND IT'LL get on your nerves.

AND THEN one day.

YOU'LL TELEPHONE your wife.

TO COME downtown for dinner.

AND YOU'RE going to the theatre.

AND SHE'LL look so happy.

AND SO very beautiful.

AND SO much like the girl.

THAT YOU one time married.

THAT AFTER you get home.

YOU'LL TAKE her in your arms.

AND ASK her to forgive you.

AND SHE will.

AND IF I were you, Fred.

I'D LET her book me.

FOR AN occasional banquet.

Grand Duces, Not Jews
Wall Street's Nightmare.
Russia is a Slaughter House.
But Western Europe Thinks.

By Arthur Brisbane

Copyright, 1918.

The favorite "Indoor Sport" of Wall Street might now be called "hearing yourself to death," or the "Bolshevik nightmare."

In the Chicago Herald and Examiner yesterday "Bolshevism" by far the most enlightened writer on finance in the United States, published an article that every business man should read.

"Bolshevism" points out that the revolution of 1918, totally unlike the present movement in Western Europe, was more like the Russian agitation of today.

In 1848 the French King was deposed; Ferdinand of Austria abdicated; the Prussian King, well scared, promptly put himself on the side of the revolutionists, "hearing himself to death." The great convention was called at Frankfurt to bring about the millennium, perfection on earth. France had tried it fifty years earlier and got Napoleon instead of the millennium.

After the dreamers of 1848, who understood everything but human nature, and the fact that they and their followers were also savages, there was a while, the whole thing melted away.

Hismark was there, nominally for the revolution, really directing matters for his King, carrying in his brain the force to let that dreamer back, and the fixed purpose.

Professors and newspaper men talked and philosophized. Working men decided that all unpleasant work was to end forever. Then kings could come back on their thrones, working men went back to work. Hismark conquered France, taking a big slice of territory—which was his particular foolishness—and today the revolution business starting all over again.

It is all so anarchy and murder, for there is 85 per cent. of the population of Europe who are against a dream of perfection, mixed with murder and robbery.

The revolution in Western Europe is a difficult business to end, the order of the German revolutionists is to maintain discipline and they shoot people that neglect it.

There are no illiterate men, women or children in Germany, and what is more, leaving aside the thousands of German, and what is more, leav-
